

CONTRACT LET FOR NEW POSTOFFICE BUILDING

CALLAHAN-MANDEL BID IS ACCEPTED

Treasury Department Approves Bid of Chicago Firm for $49,700, the Lowest Filed.

LIMESTONE WILL BE USED

Work Will be Started Soon and Building Will be Ready for Occupancy in Spring of 1917.

By United Press.
Washington, November 15.—The treasury department today awarded a contract for $49,700 for the construction of the postoffice building at Seymour, Ind., to Callahan-Mandel Company, of Chicago.

In accordance with a dispatch sent to Republican last week by the United Press Association that the contract for the new postoffice building to be constructed here would be awarded on or before November 15, the contract was today let to the Chicago concern which filed the lowest bid. The contract that was accepted calls for a building of Bedford limestone.

It is understood that the preliminary work on the new building will be started this winter, if possible, and that early in the spring as soon as the weather is settled the construction work will begin. The new home of the local postoffice, it is stated, will be completed and ready for occupancy early in the spring of 1917.

The awarding of the contract for this building means the beginning of the end of the long tedious routine that is necessary to secure such a building. By waiting a year, however, Seymour will have a stone building instead of a brick building which was originally planned. Even after the plans were completed the citizens at the suggestion of Congressman Dixon filed a petition asking that a stone structure be erected. After the petition was received an additional appropriation was made and the plans were accordingly altered.

Fifteen contractors from various parts of the country filed bids for the construction of the building. The plans and specifications which were sent to Postmaster Swope by the treasury department called for the building completely equipped with the exception of the machines which will be installed by the postoffice department.

As the building here will have large quarters for the division inspector it is believed that Seymour will be the headquarters of this division as soon as the new home is completed. In the basement is a large room for holding civil service examinations and this is taken to mean that such tests will hereafter be held in Seymour.

PROF. JENKINS SPEAKS ON "IBSEN, THE INDIVIDUALIST"

Second of Series of Lectures on Drama Delivered Before City Teachers Saturday.

"Ibsen, the Individualist," was the subject of an entertaining address by Prof. W. S. Jenkins of Indiana University, before the Seymour Teachers Saturday afternoon. This was the second of the series of lectures on the drama which Prof. Jenkins is delivering to the local teachers this year. Several others who are interested in the drama have heard the lectures, which are open to all who wish to attend. Prof. Jenkins' subject at the December institute will be George Bernard Shaw, the English dramatist.

In the lecture Saturday the speaker told of Ibsen's life and career and traced several of his more important works, including "Peer Gynt" and "A Doll's House," which are perhaps the best known works of the great Norwegian dramatist.

FALLING WALL BURIES MAN BENEATH BRICKS

Louis Booker, of Shale Hill, Seriously Injured While Tearing Down Building at Sparksville.

While engaged in tearing down a brick building at Sparksville Saturday, Louis Booker, who lives near Shale Hill, was seriously injured when one of the walls of the building caved in upon him, burying him under the bricks. He was imprisoned for some time before his plight was discovered and he could be removed. At first his injuries were feared to be fatal, but reports today indicate that he has a chance to recover. Several ribs were broken and he suffered many other injuries. He was removed to his home after he had been given medical attention at Sparksville.

BROWNSTOWN RESIDENCE DESTROYED BY FLAMES

Dwelling Occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weathers is Total Loss—Furniture Insured.

Fire completely destroyed the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weathers of Brownstown, Sunday evening, about 8 o'clock. The occupants of the house were at church, and had left a fire in the stove, which is supposed to have been the origin of the blaze. The building, with all its contents, was a total loss. The furniture was covered by insurance, but the house, which was owned by Frank Miller, was not insured, the policy having been allowed to lapse a few days.

Clyde Poulter "That Little Man" arrived this afternoon and will give an entertainment at the Christian Church this evening. Program will begin at 8 o'clock. Mr. Poulter will be assisted by local talent in a musical program.

FRANK PATRICK STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS SUNDAY

The stroke came suddenly after he and members of his family had returned from an automobile trip to Greenwood, where they visited his son. When he reached home Sunday night he started for the basement to build a fire in the furnace. Before entering the basement he reached for the match box and remarked that the matches were hard to pick up. After he was stricken his condition was serious for several hours.

LEADING FARMER CALLED BY DEATH

James Marsh, 67, Passes Away After Short Illness with Uraemic Poisoning.

HEAD OF FARMERS' INSTITUTE

For Several Years President of the Jackson County Sunday School Association.

James Marsh, aged sixty-seven, a widely known farmer of Redding township and prominent in agricultural and religious movements of the county, died at 11:30 o'clock this morning at the Schneck Memorial Hospital where he was removed Friday to receive treatment for uraemic poisoning. He had been ailing for several weeks but was taken seriously ill Thursday night. Sunday it was realized that his condition was extremely dangerous and his strength gradually ebbed away until death came.

Mr. Marsh was actively identified with the Jackson County Farmers' Institute and was president of that organization for several years. He was interested in the most improved methods of agriculture and worked diligently in behalf of any movement that was intended to benefit the farming community.

The deceased was a prominent member of the Christian church at Redding, and was a leader in the county affairs of that denomination. He was also president of the Jackson County Sunday School Association, an inter-denominational organization.

Mr. Marsh as the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucebra Marsh and was born in Jennings county, September 11, 1848. In October the same year his parents moved to Redding township, this county, and he spent his entire life in that community. He was reared in the old Marsh homestead and was educated in the common schools of the township. He labored on his father's farm until 1868 when he began his independent career as a farmer, having received forty-five acres of land from his father's estate. In 1901 he purchased a general store at Redding which business was profitable. During the time, however, he also looked after his farming interests and from time to time invested money in more land until at the time of his death he was one of the largest landowners in Redding township.

During his years of active work on the farm Mr. Marsh gave considerable attention to stock raising and made large shipments to the principal markets in this section of the country.

Mr. Marsh was held in the highest esteem in his home community where his friends had known him since boyhood and where he was recognized as a man of honor, truth and integrity. He served one term as township trustee, having been elected on the Democratic ticket. He was also a member of the board of county commissioners for three and one half years and in 1898-9 represented this district in the state legislature. He was public spirited and ever ready to lend his aid and cooperation to the furtherance of all enterprises tending to conserve the general welfare of the county and state.

Mr. Marsh was twice married. His first marriage took place on February 11, 1868 to Miss Mary E. Cox, and to them were born three children all living. They are Mrs. George Baker, Reddington; Mrs. Blanche Brun, of Dallas, Tex., and Lucieba, of Redding township. He also leaves four grandchildren. Mr. Marsh's first wife died June 7, 1912. About two years ago he was united in marriage to Mrs. Anna Trotter, who survives him.

The funeral arrangements had not been completed this afternoon.

AUSTRIAN POSITIONS REMAIN UNCHANGED

This is Statement Issued From Vienna War Office Relative to Italian Campaign.

By United Press.
Berlin, November 15.—"I maintain all positions just as I took charge of them when the war began," declared the field commander of the Austrian forces on the Italian front in an interview cabled from headquarters and received here today.

"The third Insonzo battle can practically be considered ended which means that the Italians who were the attackers lost it," the Vienna war office said. The Italian troops were given credit in the statement for fighting with bravery, special reference being made to the courage of their unsuccessful attempts to capture the Goritz bridgehead. A compliment was paid to the excellence of their artillery.

On the western front the Germans wrested from the French about three hundred yards of trenches northeast of Ecurie.

Serb Diplomatic Representative in Paris Makes This Charge to Correspondent.

(By William Philip Simms, United Press Correspondent.)

Paris, November 15.—Extermination—not conquest of the country alone—but complete obliteration of its people is the German, Austrian and Bulgarian aim in Serbia, Minister Vestnitch, Serb diplomatic representative in Paris, charged today.

"We have proof," he told me in an exclusive interview, "that our enemies wish to stamp us out. The minister was appealing for American aid for his people, 'but it will be harder to give than it was in Belgium,' he admitted hopelessly, 'because in our case the invaders want us to perish.'"

MAKES ADDRESS BEFORE COMMONS

Churchill Tells Members He is Responsible for the Allies Dardanelles' Campaign.

"WAS GAMBLE OF WAR," HE SAYS

Denies That He Was in Favor of the Antwerp Expedition Earlier in the War.

By United Press.
London, November 15.—Winston Churchill this afternoon frankly admitted responsibility for the allies' Dardanelles campaign recently the object of the most severe condemnation, but denied responsibility for the Antwerp expedition earlier in the war. He laid the Antwerp campaign at the door of Lord Kitchener and the French authorities.

Churchill made the explanation in an address before commons which was promised when he resigned his seat in the ministry last week and offered to join his regiment in France. Before crowded galleries he answered the men who had criticized his own administration of military and naval affairs while he was first lord of admiralty. He also answered the pessimists who expressed doubt about the outcome of the war.

"I regard the Dardanelles enterprise as a legitimate gamble of war for a prize is inestimable value, which there was a reasonable chance of winning," said Churchill. "On that basis I went before the ministry and accepted full responsibility for initiating that enterprise. 'For those who expressed fear that the allies were moving towards certain defeat because of diplomatic reverses in the Balkans the former cabinet minister said he had little patience. 'We have no reason to be discouraged,' he said amid applause. 'We are passing through bad times and we probably will pass through worse times before they are better. But they will be better.' Members cheered Churchill as he took his seat. 'I have always found him,' said Premier Asquith replying to Churchill, 'to be a wise counsellor, a brilliant colleague and a faithful friend. He takes with him in leaving the ministry universal good will.'"

If You Knew Me.

If I knew you and you knew me,
'Tis seldom we would disagree;
But, never having yet clasped hands,
Both often fail to understand
That each intends to do what's right,
And treat each other "honor bright."
How little to complain there'd be,
If I knew you and you knew me.

Then let no doubting thoughts abide,
Of firm good faith on either side;
Confidence to each other give,
Living ourselves, let others live;
But any time you come this way,
That you will call, we hope and pray;
Then face to face we each shall see,
And I'll know you and you'll know me.

NOT ACCORDING TO PROGRAM.

Within a week after Morton became governor, the legislature adjourning for a day to participate in exercises attending the raising of the flag over the state house. In the hope that ceremonies might be conciliatory, the name of Governor
Morton was absent on the program.
Senator-elect Lane gave a homeopathic address, Hendrichs spoke on "State Equality," and Hammond for the Crittenden compromise. But the people were not satisfied and cries for Morton filled the air. In response he delivered a ringing impromptu address said to have been one of his most eloquent. "I am not here," he said, "to argue questions of state equality, but to denounce treason and uphold the cause of the Union." His speech gave emphasis to the exercises and helped clear up the murky political atmosphere.

WASHES CLOTHES EASILY
IN COLD WATERBOOKER T. WASHINGTON
DIES AT TUSKEGEEForemost Negro Educator Spent Life Elevating His Race.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 15.—News of Professor Booker T. Washington's death was received in Mobile from Tuskegee, Ala., by Clarence W. Allen, local colored undertaker of this city with whom the negro educator spent a vacation during the latter part of September and October.

This brief telegram stated that Washington had died at the institute shortly after arriving from New York, and that the funeral would occur on Wednesday.

A widow, three children and four grandchildren survive. John H. Washington, a brother, is superintendent of industries at Tuskegee institute.

Although he had been in failing health for several months, the negro leader's condition became serious only last week while he was in the east.
He then realized the end was near,
but was determined to make the last long strip south. He had said often,
"I was born in the south, have lived all my life in the south and expect to die and be buried in the south."

Dr. Washington was born in slavery near Hales Ford, Virginia, in 1857 or 1858. After the emancipation of his race he moved with his family to West Virginia. He was an ambitious boy and saved his money for an education. When he was able to scrape together sufficient money to pay his stage coach fare to Hampton, Va., he entered General Armstrong's school for negroes there and worked his way through an academic course, graduating in 1875.

In 1881 he organized the industrial School for Negroes in Tuskegee, to which he devoted most of his attention during the remaining years of his life.

BOY HAS HIS ARM SHOT OFF

Gun Discharged While He Was Climbing a Fence.

Carmel, Ind., Nov. 15.—Henry Miller, thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Miller, living near here, climbed over a fence with a shotgun while hunting and when the gun was discharged his left arm was torn away.

Other hunters heard the shot and improvised a tourniquet, which stopped the flow of blood. As one of the men was carrying the boy across a field to his home Miller fell from the man's shoulder and a few minutes later the bearer stumbled and he fell to the ground with his burden.
Young Miller was conscious all the time and suffered great pain. His arm was amputated three inches below the shoulder.

GERMAN BIRTH RATE IS LOW

Government Urges Marriage and the Rearing of Children.

London, Nov. 1.—"Every German man must be taught to feel that he has failed to perform a pious and patriotic duty if he is not a father; and every woman must be made to understand that she has failed in her obligations to Germany if she does not become a wife and mother."

Sociologists, detached from the immediate war service to study the problems of increasing German's population, have submitted to the government a memorandum of which the above is the keynote.

The percentage of births in the German empire has been decreasing for some time, even before the war considerable alarm being felt. Now that the war, with its untold numbers of victims, has made the problem one of extreme gravity, "German organization" has stepped in to provide ways and means to encourage the birth rate.

Stranger Locked Up Too Late to Pre-

Goshen, Ind., Nov. 15.—Walking into the office of Dr. E. P. Cunning-blum of Rochester, N. Y., twenty-five years old, exhibited a bottle of strychnine he had bought at a nearby drug store and asked: "How much of this must I take to insure death?"

The dentist called Sheriff Thomas and Correnblum was taken to jail. As he entered a cell he exclaimed: "There is no use of putting me in here, for in twenty minutes I will be dead." Soon he was discovered in convulsions.

A letter mailed from Rochester by Correnblum's wife pleaded for him to return home, saying she and the children were starving. Correnblum came here from Chicago.

trying to hire a chauffeur the other day and went about it in his usually breezy style. When the first applicant ap-curry a horse and make a cocktail."

"Well, I can do
'em all and still have a few tricks
up my sleeve,"
said the chauffeur, with becoming modesty.

Tad looked him over and then said suddenly: "I don't know. When I lamp your face and see your horn painted up that way it strikes me that you are a hard drinker, and I don't want any am not a hard drinker. It comes easy to me."—Cartoons Magazine.

a formidable rival in Joseph Choate.
Choate wished to obtain designs for a chimney piece for a new house he was being unable to get what he wanted wrote to the builder telling him to cancel

Instead the workmen immediately

ASSISTANT POSTMASTER

President Objects to Action Resulting From Remark Made by Winnetka, Ill. Man.

By United Press.

Washington, November 15.—President Wilson today instructed Postmaster General Burleson to re-in-state George Burkitt, as assistant postmaster at Winnetka, Ill., if the only charge against him is that he criticized the president for his coming marriage. Postmaster Kloefer discharged Burkitt because of an alleged remark that he believed the "president should have waited at least a year before marrying again."

"This is a free country" said Secretary Tumulty in making known President Wilson's request. Tumulty said the president had known nothing about the charges brought against Burkitt until publicity was given the matter. The president is understood to feel that because of the nature of the charges he should have been personally consulted before action was taken. The president's mortification given the matter is strongly reflected in administration circles.

Both Stung.

Some time ago an eminent London physician requested an equally eminent surgeon to accompany him to see a distinguished but slippery patient.
The patient was exceedingly polite to both the medical gentlemen, shaking hands with them and bowing them out of the room in the most affable manner. Soon after this professional visit the same physician called again on the surgeon, requesting him to accompany him to see another patient. On their way thither the surgeon observed, "I hope this patient will behave more liberally than the last did."

"Why?" said the M. D. "Did he not give you a fee?"

"Not a shilling," was the reply.

"Indeed!" said the eminent physician, with a toss of the head. "Why, he borrowed 2 guineas from me to give to you!"

Quick Story Telling.

Mme. Bernhardt is fond of relating a very funny experience she had during her early days as an actress with an actor who was something of a wit and who was addicted to "gagging."
"It is so long ago," she says, "that I recall neither the player nor the play, only the part wherein the scene was spoiled. The hero said to me, 'Do you object to this cigar?' which he had already lighted and was puffing vigorously."

"No, no, no!" I answered, which was the cue for him to tell me the story of his life.

"He looked at me instead and said, rolling the cigar between his fingers,
'That, madame, is because you do not have to smoke it.'"

"The audience appreciated the fact that he was smoking a cigar furnished by the property man, and roared with laughter, but this interference made him forget his lines. He could not recollect a word, so, taking my arm, he said, 'Come with me for a walk, and I will tell you the story of my life.'"

"We walked off the stage and on at the next entrance, which required no more than two seconds of time, and then he said, 'Now I have told you the story of my life.'"

Circumspect.

A very circumspect and conscientious young miss of four was sent into the parlor of a certain Philadelphia household to entertain a caller for a few minutes until her mother should appear.

The conversation drifted to a discussion of the youngster's intellectual acquirements, and the visitor asked:

"Do you know the alphabet, Marie?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Will you say it for me?"

Marie began glibly enough, but after she had given three or four letters she stopped short, saying, "If you please, ma'am, I don't think I better say any more."

"And why not?" asked the caller, surprised.

"Those are not all I know," explained the youngster; "but, you know, mamma says I mustn't tell all I know!"

If you have Republican Advertising on your mind, you're right.

PROPOSES DEFENSE
TO PRIMARY LAW

Author of Bill Thinks Only Members of Party Could Challenge Vote of Their Primary.

WOMEN REMOVE OBJECTION

Carl H. Mote, Former Progressive, Files Suit to Test Section Ten of the Law.

By United Press.
Indianapolis, November 15.—If the defense of the primary law in the suit filed here attacking its tenth section listens to John R. Jones, the author of the law, it will make its fight along lines that might call for a new interpretation of the section. Carl H. Mote, a former Progressive, but now a Republican, alleges that Horace G. Casady, his neighbor and a democrat, intends to challenge his vote at the Republican primary. Section ten of the law would prevent anyone voting at any primary who could not by affidavit show that at the last election previous he had voted for a majority of the candidates of that party. Mote fears that he will be challenged by Casady and therefore, be prevented from taking part in the Republican primaries.

Jones asserted today that the proper interpretation of the section will remove all danger of such action by Casady because he is a Democrat. His interpretation was that only Republicans have a right to challenge at a Republican primary, and that Democrats have no license under the new primary law to intrude upon the Republican primary and vice versa. If this interpretation should be found correct it would remove the greatest objection found to the law thus far by the Republican state committee, which is back of the suit.

At the office of the state bureau of legislative information the opinion was expressed today that even though the tenth section of the primary law was found unconstitutional, it would not make void the rest of the law.

Certain friends of the law said today they believed it was the intention of the enemies to start court proceedings that will tie the law up in the courts until after the March primaries, thus making it ineffective. These people professed to see substantiation of this belief in the fact that action in Gibson county was dismissed November 10, just five days before the date of hearing. The case was in Gibson county on change of venue from Knox county. These persons assert that if action is delayed in Marion county it is not beyond reason to fear that the primary law will reach the supreme court so near the primaries the court will not be able to give its decision before the primaries.

Secretary Henly of the Republican state committee, in direct denial of any charge of bad faith, told the United Press today, that this suit is filed in good faith after months of work by the state committee and that the case will be pushed to the logical conclusion in the supreme court.

This is the only case officially backed by the Republican committee. Also it is the only one attacking the tenth section exclusively. Other cases it was pointed out, have been directed against election officials.

One of the interesting sidelights of the case is that Mote was one of the most active men about the state house during the 1915 legislature, gathering data concerning the primary. Mote sent out a questionnaire to hundreds of precinct men throughout the United States, asking their opinion on the primary question. This data found its way to Jones who used portions of it, especially a letter from Sen. Kern, as a club to force the bill through.

Mote wrote the first bill that Jones introduced in the legislature. However, this bill did not have a section similar to the one Mote is now attacking. Mote is actively engaged at the headquarters of James P. Goodrich, Republican candidate for the nomination for governor. Both Goodrich and Mote hail from Randolph county.

DEMOCRATS WILL FIND
SEATS ON REPUBLICAN SIDE

"Cherokee Strip" will be New Condition in Senate Because of Democratic Majority.

Washington, D. C., November 15.—A "cherokee strip" of Democrats in the Senate is another new condition resulting from a Democratic majority. For the first time in a generation, a Democratic overflow will find seats on the Republican side. Three Democrats, Broussard of Louisiana, Husting of Wisconsin, and Johnson of South Dakota, will comprise the "strip" with seats on the left of the party dividing line, the center aisle.

The strip is not representative of the Democrats' power. Of the 96 Senators, the Democrats have 56. Extra desks have been placed in the Democratic section. The incoming members are to be in the rear. Senator Underwood of Alabama, former House leader, will be in the back row, between Hollis of New Hampshire, and Lewis of Illinois. By the way, it's "Hamilton"—not James Hamilton or even Jim Ham—now, officially. He has retained the pink whiskers but dropped the front name. On the Republican side Senator Sherman of Illinois, gets seat No. 1, in the front row right beneath the clerk's desk. He is slightly deaf. Wadsworth, of New York, youthful successor to Root, will be in the last row, between Harding of Ohio, also a newcomer, and Curtis of Kansas, a returned Republican veteran.

In the House the conditions of Democratic supremacy are different. There the Democrats will have a scant majority of about thirty. Last year they had over 100. Neither will the house members scramble for seats. It's a free-for-all, daily take-your-choice arrangement there, except for the party leaders.

An automatic voting device, to displace the long, tedious oral roll call of the 435 members, may be tried in the House this session. Flashlights on a huge name board, with the members voting by turning keys automatically recording their votes, are planned.

FOR A BIGGER SEYMOUR.

The re-organization of the Seymour Commercial Club is only started. That the business men and citizens generally want to support the organization in this campaign was evidenced by the rousing meeting Friday night. Co-operations was pledged and the people of this city are ready to assume their portion of the responsibility for a Bigger Seymour.

The speakers offered many valuable suggestions for the work that is in mind here. One of the best, we believe, was that a definite plan of action be first adopted. Hit and miss efforts seldom produce the best results. It is only by concerted action that the most effective work is accomplished. It seems to us that the Commercial Club should decide along what line its efforts are to be concentrated so that no time and no labor will be lost.

The possibilities for Seymour are unlimited. Seymour people may rightfully be proud of their city and the unusual facilities that are offered. Yet these possibilities and facilities will amount to nothing unless the best is made of them. We know what we have, and it is our duty to tell others who may be interested. To the Commercial Club is left the duty of bringing these conditions before manufacturers who desire to locate their factories in the best city in Indiana.

The Commercial Club cannot do the work unaided. The directors and officers are but the representatives of the people. The citizens, all of whom will reap the benefits, must give the organization their support. In fact, what is done will depend largely upon the encouragement given the officers of the Club. The Commercial Club is truly entering into a new era of activity in a field holding great possibilities that can be developed making Seymour the Great Gateway Through Southern Indiana.

The liquor forces, especially the brewers, are making much ado about the shipment of liquor from "wet" states into "dry" territory. The shipments are used as an illustration that "prohibition does not prohibit." But if the brewers only could realize it they are doing the very thing that will hasten national prohibition. One great objection against liquor business is that it does not recognize law. If the people of a state or a county vote to make that territory "dry" the natural presumption is that they want their laws enforced. The temperance movement is growing and if the brewers insist on violating the law of the "dry" territory it will only lead to a great uprising whereby the legalized liquor traffic will be swept from the country so that all states will be on the same basis.

Edwin P. Morrow, the defeated Republican candidate for governor of Kentucky, is a statesman of the true type. Instead of contesting the election, and they were undoubtedly good grounds for a contest, he acknowledges the election of his Democratic opponent rather than plunge the state into a state of political turmoil. He says that such a conflict would detract from greater things which benefit the state and he wants to see the great internal development and advancement continue unhindered. Mr. Morrow places his state before his own personal political desires and is deserving of great commendation.

Grazed in the Fog.

It is not usual for a ship on the high seas to elect to cast anchor on the deck of a passing steamer, but that is what a four masted schooner did once in the Atlantic. The two vessels grazed in the fog, and the "catted" port anchor of the schooner caught in the steamer's deck "by a fluke." It fastened to an engineer's stateroom in such a manner as to bar his exit, but fortunately the chain parted just as the room was being ripped into fragments. The schooner followed the steamer to its destination to recover her anchor.

Dark Stars.

It is reasonable to assume that the number of stars in space having a temperature so low that their radiations do not affect our eyes or photographic plates is extremely large. That these invisible stars are far more numerous than the luminous stars is suggested by F. A. Lindemann, who attempts in the Monthly Notices a rough calculation of their relative number based on the assumption that new stars (novae) are due to collisions. He concludes that there are about 4,000 times as many dark stars as bright ones.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY IN CORONATION SERVICE

Emperor of Japan in Snow White Garment, Makes Offerings to the Gods.

By United Press

Kyoto, Japan, November 15.—Today's ceremonial event in the coronation of Yoshihito as Emperor of Japan is his solemn offering to the gods of his first fruits of the reign and the purification of his person by the high priests, whereat he wears a pure white kimono.

The ceremonial will begin in the little thatched-roofed, wooden houses at sun down and conclude at sunrise, after which the Emperor is expected to sleep all day. Watch-fires will blaze around the sanctuaries and old men with bows and arrows will squat around them, listening to the chanting of barbaric odes.

The climax of the night's ceremony is the offering of specially prepared food, clothing and drink to the gods by the emperor, after which, in absolute secrecy, he will dine with them. They will eat sacred rice and drink rice wine.

Yoshihito will enter the sanctuary under an umbrella of rushes, walking upon a bamboo mat unrolling before him. This ceremony will be observed in each of the two sanctuary buildings. The offering and feast will be followed by the purification of the Emperor by the priests.

If you have Republican Advertising on your mind, you're right.

YOU'LL BE ASTONISHED—even tho you read the recent big two-page Reo announcement; even tho, from a knowledge of Reo reputation, Reo quality and Reo values in the past, your expectations have been keyed up to the highest pitch—still, we say, you'll be astonished at the value you'll see in this magnificent Reo creation at $1,250.

AND SEEING IS ONLY HALF—you cannot appreciate to the full the roominess, the excellence of upholstery, the superiority of the cantilever springs, the general luxuriousness of this car until you have ridden in it; nor the wonderfully simple Reo control until you've driven it yourself.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

AUSTRIA GIVES ANCONA REPORT

Assumes Responsibility For Ship's Loss.

NEW ISSUE RAISED WITH U. S.

Government May Protest Ship Was Destroyed Before All Her Passengers and Crew Had Left Her—Declares Liner Fled.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The Italian liner Ancona case, which has been puzzling the department of state ever since she was torpedoed in the Mediterranean, was presented in still another light with the issuance of a statement by the Austro-Hungarian embassy, giving the official account of the destruction of the liner.

While the Austro-Hungarian statement, if accepted as correct, disposes of the question as to whether the Ancona was warned before being attacked, it raises still another issue in which the United States may prove to be vitally concerned. It is shown that any Americans were killed by the actual torpedoing of the Ancona, it is believed the United States will protest on the ground that the vessel was torpedoed before all her passengers and crew had left her. The statement follows:

"The submarine fired one shot in front of Ancona's prow, whereupon the steamer fled at full speed, in accordance with the order issued by the Italian authorities, which instructs ship commanders to flee or to sink the submarine. The submarine pursued the steamer and continued firing, but the vessel stopped only after being hit several times.

"The submarine allowed forty-five minutes for the passengers and crew to abandon the steamer on board of which panic reigned, but only a small number of boats were lowered and these were occupied principally by the crew.

"A great number of the boats, probably sufficient to save all the passengers, remained unoccupied.

"After a period of fifty minutes and as another steamer was approaching the submarine submerged and torpedoed the Ancona, which sank after an additional forty-five minutes.

"If any of the passengers lost their lives this was due to the fault of the crew, because the steamer tried to escape after it had received orders to stop, and then the crew only saved themselves and not the passengers.

"Reports published in the foreign press that the submarine fired on the Ancona's lifeboats are mendacious inventions.

JITNEY ELOPEMENT BEATS IRATE FATHER

Elopes With Daughter of His Chief Witness.

Delphi, Ind., Nov. 15.—Closely pursued in a "jitney" by her irate father, Miss Cecil Kelley, daughter of William Kelley, eloped from this city to Logansport in another "jitney."

Before starting he telephoned the Logansport police, but the elopers stopped long enough at Rockfield on the way to be married, and then fled on to Logansport, where they arrived just ten minutes ahead of Kelley.

Her lover, Riley Mullendore, came to this city from Logansport and obtained a marriage license, and the pair fled almost half an hour ahead of Kelley.

Mullendore was tried for the murder of Cleveland Cook in this city last winter and was acquitted after a trial lasting several weeks. In this trial and in the first trial of the case at Lafayette, Kelley, who is city water works engineer here, was one of the most important witnesses for the defense.

His daughter obtained a divorce from Anthony Hanrahan, a prominent young farmer, with the restoration of her maiden name, recently. The young woman's mother was prostrated when she received the news of the elopement and is in a critical condition.

FAY TO REVEAL GERMAN PLOTS

Reported Teuton Spy Has Confessed to Chief.

HOLDS LONG CONFERENCE

Said to Have Told Story of the Activity of the German Secret Service in the United States to Chief Flynn—Revelations May Be Startling.

New York, Nov. 15.—The alleged German spy, Robert Fay, who, after fighting in the German army in the trenches, came to this country to carry out a plot for destroying ships of the allies, sailing from this port with munitions of war, sent a hurry call from his cell in the Tombs for William J. Flynn, chief of the secret service, and John C. Knox, special assistant United States attorney.

The ex-lieutenant was eager to talk to somebody. It was clear that he had come to some decision about his future attitude regarding the charges against him and he must unburden himself at once. Mr. Knox could not be reached, but the chief reached the Tombs just as reporters were gathering there in the hope of communicating with Fay.

The reason for Fay's apparent change of attitude toward the government officials has been apparent for several days. Though he has done everything in his power to shield men associated with him, he has learned that certain persons who were allied with him have not been as staunchly faithful as he.

For more than an hour the chief talked with Fay in the counsel room and he is reported to have taken notes even more copiously than a reporter. What was discussed between the head of the secret service and the alleged bomb plotter could not be learned from Mr. Flynn.

From reliable sources, however, the following three significant facts were learned:

First, That Fay has offered to turn state's evidence.

Second, The story which Fay has told about himself has been verified in Europe almost to a word.

Third, The United States has evidence corroborating Fay's story, as already printed, and connecting the German secret service with the plans to wreck munition ships, blow up or set fire to munition factories in this country.

If Fay swings over to the prosecution's side, it seems certain that Walter Scholz, his mechanic and chief aid, will do likewise. He, however, was not called in to the conference.

GERMAN SPY SYSTEM IN U. S.

Charges Violation of Neutrality by Spending Millions.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 15.—The Providence Journal says:

"A vast fund of money, amounting to between $25,000,000 and $40,000,000 has been spent in this country in the past four months for propaganda work against the allies, under the immediate supervision of Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, and Dr. Henrich Albert, privy councillor, who describes himself as the fiscal agent of his government.

"The Journal has positive record of the receipt by Ambassador von Bernstorff and Dr. Albert of at least $10,000,000 in the time mentioned. A great deal of this money has come through the Guaranty Trust company of New York.

"The Journal charges that not one dollar of this money has been spent for legitimate purposes, but that all of it is going for propaganda work of the most vicious description. One item alone, the maintenance of bureaus for dragging men out of munitions factories, amounts to many millions of dollars.

HEART BALM SUIT FAILS

Greensburg, Ind., Nov. 15.—The jury in the Emig-Marr breach of promise case, on trial here, reported to Judge Wickens that it could not agree and was discharged.

SERBS SLOWLY FALLING BACK

Driven Through Mountains by Teutons.

ALLIES WIN SUCCESSES

Bulgars Delt Hard Blows by Anglo-French Forces—Political Situation In Greece Presents Grave Possibilities—Russians Victorious Again.

London, Nov. 15.—Before the advance of the Austro-German armies the Serbians are falling back from mountain range to mountain range. The Teutonic official reports enumerate the capture of one thousand or more prisoners daily, a few guns and quantities of stores.

For the moment, the political situation is graver than the military. The central powers again have protested to Greece against the landing of allied troops at Salonika. King Constantine is reported to have replied that as Salonika is an open port there has been no infringement of Greek rights in the landing and that Greece will remain neutral until one of the belligerents has transgressed against those rights.

The Servians are fighting continuously, however, and are inflicting considerable losses on their pursuers.

Along the eastern front the Servians appear to be holding their own against the Bulgarians and are making a stand on the western bank of the Morava river. So stubborn has been their resistance the Bulgarians have had to call for assistance from the Austro-German artillery in their effort to drive the defenders out of Katchanik pass. Thus far they have been unsuccessful.

The British and French troops, which are receiving reinforcements, are meeting with some success, and, besides repulsing the Bulgarian attacks, have undertaken small offensive movements with good results.

The Austro-Germans and the Bulgarians, however, made such progress from the beginning of the campaign that it will take serious work now to check them.

The Russians have definitely repelled Field Marshal von Hindenburg's drive toward Riga and Drinsk and along the Dvina river and have themselves been able to make only slow progress in the marsh region west of Riga.

Along the Sty river in the south the Austro-Germans by a counter-stroke have pierced the Russian lines and captured 1,500 prisoners, according to the Berlin official statement.

On the western front there have been no events of importance.

The Italian government has sent an official communication to the neutral governments dealing with the sinking by a submarine of the Italian liner Ancona, according to a dispatch from Rome. The note denies that the Ancona carried any arms or contraband or persons in belligerent military service, or that there were any circumstances justifying such an attack as a necessity of war.

Guard Against Spies.

Paris, Nov. 15.—Military officers at Salonika have taken stringent measures to assure secrecy regarding the operations and movements of the troops of the entente allies, according to a dispatch from Greece to the Temps. All suspects, including a number of irregular troops and merchants, have been expelled from the military zone.

Italian Reservists Leave U. S.

New York, Nov. 15.—Sixteen hundred Italian reservists sailed for Naples on the Italian liner Taormina, a sister ship of the Ancona. The Taormina also carried 106 passengers. Among them was David H. McCullough, an instructor in aviation, who is to instruct young aviators in the Italian army.

Boy Hunter Killed.

Terre Haute, Ind., Nov. 15.—Kelt Starrett, thirteen years old, was accidentally shot and killed by Fred Rankin, fourteen years old, while the boys were hunting near Coal Creek hill. Both boys live on Coal Creek.

CHAPTER II.

The Course of True Love.

"WELL, if you're ready, my dear, here goes," Mr. Martin began briskly to his stenographer, Mary Grayson.

To John Clark, Esq., Soap Works, New York, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—Confirming our conversation of even date I send you a line to record the bet made this morning between us in re our sons, Elmer Clark and Rodney Martin respectively—namely, that if my boy, by his own unaided efforts, isn't making more money at the end of a year from Nov. 1 next than your boy makes, I pay you thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in cash; and if he is, then you pay that sum to me; the books of their several business concerns, duly audited, to be the deciding factor. Yours very truly,

"Got that?" he added, darting a keen glance at Mary beneath his thick eyebrows.

"Yes, Mr. Martin," said that young lady in a voice which she was evidently trying to make as colorless as possible.

"Well, what do you think of it?" demanded Mr. Martin, breaking a short pause.

"I think Mr. Rodney has more brains than you give him credit for," said Mary impulsively.

"Oh, you do, do you?"

"Yes, sir, I do. But isn't $30,000 a good deal of money to lose on a bet? Somebody always loses, you know. And Mr. Rodney has never had any business experience to speak of. You wouldn't have him in your own works, you know."

"Of course I wouldn't. I didn't want Rod posing there as the boss' son, interfering with the good discipline of the establishment. Besides, I didn't want them all down there to see what a nincompoop he was in business. I've got more pride than that."

"Aren't you a little hard on Rodney, Mr. Martin?" asked Mary gently.

"Are you a little sweet on Rodney, Miss Mary?" retorted the soap king gruffly.

She had her head bent over her work, and he couldn't see her features during this colloquy. He would have to carry the plummet line a little deeper.

"Because if you are," he went on, "I warn you, you'll have to marry him for love. He'll get no money from me unless he makes good. I shall make a will leaving him only an annuity, the principal to go to charity when he has fiddled himself into his grave, and I'll see to it that the annuity isn't quite enough for two, let me tell you, let alone a family of kids. I don't propose to have him or a lot of worthless grandbrats making ducks and drakes of my money when I'm gone."

"I see," said Miss Grayson. "Of course it's none of my business. Anything else, sir?"

A motor bus screeching along outside came to a full stop at the corner. Mr. Martin, who had begun to pace the room as he talked, forgetting his convenient or inconvenient gout, lingered at the window and saw two women alight and stand talking indefinitely on the sidewalk. In one of the window panes where the curtains darkened it and made a mirror he could see Mary's pretty head drooping a little, giving her body a suddenly pensive air as she gazed abstractedly into the dying fire. He turned and spoke again and was pleased to see that she started involuntarily.

"Would you mind ringing for Johnson, my dear?" he asked, more pleasantly.

Mary rose and pressed the button and then sat down again as before. Johnson came presently and obediently replenished the fire, while Cyrus Martin twiddled his keys and small change in his trousers pockets. When Johnson's stiff back had disappeared through the doorway he began again on another tack.

"Look here, Mary," he demanded in a franker tone, "I want your help. You can help me if you will, and if you benefit by it yourself, why so much the better. Pitch in and catch Rodney if you want him. I should be glad of it. Only there would be one condition."

Beneath this direct attack the girl did finally blush a little. She gathered herself together again, however, and folded up her book by way of recapturing her composure.

"Why, Mr. Martin," she said, "what an idea!"

"Why is it such an idea? Is there nothing to attract a young fellow and a good looking girl like you to each other? You're too modest, Miss Mary."

"I'm not a judge of that, Mr. Martin," said Mary.

"Oh, yes, you are!" retorted her employer. "And I'm not so sure you're not quite willing myself."

"But I think you're very unkind to me," protested Mary, taking another cue. "You appeal to my woman's curiosity. Supposing, for the sake of argument, that your son and I are madly in love with each other, what are your conditions?"

"Well," said her employer, "I tell you frankly I don't want to lose that $30,000 to John Clark, and I do want to stir Rodney up. He needs an incentive, and I've been ransacking my brains to find the right one. And I think I've found it. I think it's you."

"I, Mr. Martin? Do you really think so?" she expostulated demurely.

"Yes, I do really think so, Miss Grayson," he mimicked.

"Don't you think it's just perversity?" persisted Mary. "Do you think Rodney would really care about me if he could have me just for the asking? I don't see how I can help you at all."

"Oh, yes, you can! And I'll tell you just how," went on Old Martin trenchantly. "I want Rodney to work for his money and his wife together. I'm going to turn him out of here!"

"Turn him out, Mr. Martin? What-ever do you mean?"

"I think you're very unkind to me."

"Just what I say—turn him out, throw him overboard. Didn't you ever hear of the old admiral who taught his children to swim by throwing them overboard? The girls as well as the boys. If they didn't drown they swam," he said. But they usually swam."

"But they might have drowned," objected Mary, with a pretty shudder.

"No," said old Cyrus, with a villain's chuckle, "I've got it all doped out. I'll turn him out, right enough. I'll find a good excuse for it. I'm mad enough with him half the time. Look here, Mary, has Rodney proposed to you yet?"

"Well, really, Mr. Martin," stammered the secretary, "do you really think?"

"Well, the next time he proposes you're to accept him. See? You're to tell him you'll have him if his father consents, and then send him to ask me. That'll be my big scene."

"You'll say yes—you'll refuse?" stammered Mary, showing some concern in the success of the plot, despite her efforts to be detached and business-like.

"Consent? No! That's my cue for turning him out of my house forever," roared the stage father, working himself up into quite an advanced condition of parental fury. "Let him marry a typewriter! (Don't let that hurt your feelings, my dear.) Let some designing woman get her hands on him for a rich man's son? (Business of indignation, my dear.) I'll turn him down and out in proper fashion. Upon my word I feel like doing it this minute."

"But there's one chance you've overlooked, Mr. Martin," resumed Mary, pursing her pretty mouth slightly at the corners.

"What's that?"

"That he may not propose to me again—I mean at all," she corrected.

"Well, then, I'll disinheritor him for sure," roared the soap king. "Now, be off with you, too, before I lose my temper."

But as Mary turned to go he called after her again (what a flat, pretty back she had, he thought, subconsciously, as he watched her lay her hand on the doorknob):

"No, don't go yet. There's one thing more. We must make a bona fide deal of this thing. You want to hear my terms, of course, don't you?"

"Your terms?"

"Yes, terms, and here they are. You needn't expect anything better. I'll pay you $2,500 down if you turn the trick. Twenty-five hundred dollars! You could use it, I suppose, couldn't you?"

At these "terms" Mary turned all the way round and leaned her pretty back against the dark mahogany door, her figure in its gray dress prettily outlined against it and her hand still clinging to the cut glass knob. Twenty-five hundred dollars from Mr. Martin! Her face and eyes, if not her lips, repeated the fat and racy words. But could she? fluttered from her pretty eyes.

And yet she would, said the set mouth and chin. But no, she couldn't, said her shell-like ears, blushing as pink as coral. But yes; why not, said the firm mouth at last, and Mr. Cyrus Martin, watching this delicate byplay across her lovely features, that found more favor in his sight than ever this minute, despite his gruff demeanor, knew that the fates were playing on his side.

"Very well, Mr. Martin," said Mary Grayson finally. "It's a bargain then."

"A bargain," said old Cyrus, chuckling inwardly, and rubbing his hands together like an old fashioned actor doing the part of Shylock. "Come here, and I'll give you my blessing."

He stooped and kissed her respect fully on her white forehead and could not resist the temptation to let his hand linger a moment on the firm roundness of her upper arm and shoulder before he released her. "A bargain," he resumed, with suddenly returning gruffness. "So now go to it."

Rodney Martin himself, as luck would have it, opened the front door with his pass key and came in just as Mary was descending into the lower hall from his father's library.

"Mary," he exclaimed delightedly, "you here? What in thunder's the matter with Johnson?"

"One question at a time, please," said Mary, collecting herself as rapidly as possible. "What's Johnson got to do with it?"

"Why, I left my telephone numbers with him," explained Rodney, "so he could call me up the very moment you came in."

"You sound like a doctor going to the theater," said Mary.

"Same principle," echoed Rodney; "S O S, C Q D and all the rest of it. Safety first, you know."

Mary parried and fenced as best she could. This was going to be a somewhat earlier opportunity of putting through their scheme than she had bargained for with the old magnate upstairs. Rodney showed only too plainly that he had something on his mind. He drew her into a small reception room on the first floor and made her sit down. It was a little pink and gold room which was never used except for a cloakroom when dinners were given or the housekeeper engaged a new servant. Lately Mary's typewriting machine had come to figure inconspicuously as a part of its furnishings since the clicking keys bothered Mr. Martin in his library and Mary came down here often to write.

Despite her bargain with the old gentleman upstairs she made a brave attempt to ward off something that she saw was inevitable here and now. She took the lines in her own hands and tried to steer the conversational craft safely through the rapids.

"Rodney," she said, "tell me what you have been doing today."

He told her.

"Well, I call that a very unprofitable twelve hours," said Mary firmly. "Rodney, why don't you do something worth while? Why don't you go into some business? Have an office with your name on the door. Be somebody. It would please your father so."

Rodney was dressed in the correctest masculine fashion, Mary noted—gray spats, a braided English morning coat, a huge white carnation in his button-hole, and quite heavenly trousers. He wore a tie from Dasher's. Rodney was a nice boy, and had nice manners. He was only twenty-four, and his face had a certain quaint, frank charm in spite of his funny little mustache. He was by no means brainless, Mary was sure, notwithstanding his father's theories; only undeveloped by reason of the kind of life he had led and its appallingly frictionless conditions.

At the present moment he had an unaccustomed air of resolution that pervaded all the little room and made Mary retreat behind the typewriting desk, quailing in spite of herself. As she sat down, to her astonishment, she beheld Rodney turning the key in the door that led into the hall.

Teeth on Their Tongues.

The biggest of fresh water fishes, the "arapaima" of the Amazon, in South America, which grows to six feet in length, has teeth on its tongue, so that the latter resembles the file and is used as such. Some kinds of trout also have the same peculiarity. Fishes that swallow their prey entire have their teeth so supported on flexible bases as to bend backward, but not forward, in order that their victims shall not escape after they have been once seized.

"What on earth are you doing there, Tom?" she asked in astonishment. "Well," replied the youthful genius gravely, "I thought if the hens could hatch eggs by sitting on them so could I!"

SNOW PROVES THE COMING OF WINTER

First White Flakes of the Season
Fall in This City About 11 O'clock Sunday Night.

FREEZING WEATHER TODAY

Drop in Temperature Causes Brisk Trade in Heavy Wearing Apparel and Winter Supplies.

If there is any foundation for the old saying that there will be the same number of snow storms during the winter as the day of the month upon the first flakes of snow fall Seymour can expect fourteen flurries during the winter. The first snow of the winter season fell about 11 o'clock Sunday night, November 14. The flakes fell with the rain and could be seen in the light of the electric street lamps. They melted as soon as they hit ground and this morning there was no evidence of the first flurry.

The cold wave which brought the light snow and the freezing weather following a typical gloomy winter day during which the mercury gradually crept down the tube in the thermometer. Light showers of rain fell throughout the day and during the evening there was a decided drop in temperature. The cold wave was accompanied by a high wind which could be heard roaring high in the clouds. This section of the county was touched by the outer edge of the wind storm and no damage of consequence is reported. The telephone lines were tangled in a few places and some branches were blown down. The local telephone company suffered practically no damage.

The falling temperature was evidenced in various ways today. Many overcoats delicately perfumed with the odor of moth balls were on the street today and the way in which the wearers shoved their hands deep into the pockets and turned the blanket collars about their ears indicated that the heavy coats were needed.

This was a busy day for coal dealers and furnace men. Soon after the offices and stores were opened today the telephone calls begin to come in ordering a supply of fuel or asking that the repair man be sent up at once to look over the heater.

In the mercantile lines the trade was brisk and the customers were buying winter wearing apparel. The dry goods and clothing merchants said that trade had been good throughout the day and indicated that a busy week was anticipated. The dealers have been waiting for this sort of weather and had their winter stocks in readiness. The early buyer had already made the needed purchases and was ready for the drop but others who were inclined to believe that Seymour was to enjoy Florida weather this winter had their hopes shattered.

The dispatchers at the B. & O. Southwestern division offices keep a careful record of the weather conditions, and Guy V. Copeland, reported that snow fell about 11 o'clock. Others stated that they saw the first flakes of the winter.

DECLINED WITH THANKS.

All Invitations Were Alike to the Dignified Young Man.

"A very dignified young man took a seat in a smoking car," said the hostess, who joined in the after dinner story telling. "Near him were three traveling salesmen, well dressed, jolly fellows, one of whom suggested a game of cards, and the others agreed. They appealed to the young man to take part and make up a four handed game."

"Thank you; I never play cards," came the response to the invitation. "I am sorry for that. Will you have a cigar with us?" added the spokesman, producing his case.

"I am obliged to you, but I never smoke," replied the dignified young man.

leader produced a 'traveling companion' and asked:

"As you do not play cards nor smoke you will not refuse to join us in a drink?"

"I thank you, gentlemen, but I never drink."

"With this a venerable man with ministerial aspect sitting in the seat behind the young man reached forward and tapped him on the shoulder.

"I have heard what you have said to these men," said the sedate old fellow, "and I admire you very much for the stability of character which has enabled you to shun bad habits. I have a daughter in the parlor car whom I should like to have you meet."

"I thank you, sir," replied the young man, turning about and facing the gentleman, "but the fact is I never intend to marry."
